Wildlife Leaflet 326 (1951)

ABSTRACT OF FUR LAWS, 1951-52

Compiled by Frank G. Ashbrook, In Charge
Wild Fur Animal Investigations
Branch of Wildlife Research

Although the stocks of wild fur animals in the United States have been greatly depleted, they are still quite large. The more common fur animals are not in immediate danger of extinction, but the finer fur animals have been reduced so low that commercial quantities are negligible and some species are in danger of extinction. Nevertheless, furs are being taken in all States and in the Territory of Alaska. Even in the outskirts of such cities as New York, Chicago, and St. Louis, some furs are taken.

The information on the State fur laws compiled and published in this leaflet is for the benefit of farmers, tenants, and farm boys, who trap the largest numbers of fur animals, and of professional trappers, fur tradesmen, conservationists, and others who are interested in fur animals as an important wildlife crop.

Regulations governing the trapping of fur animals are made by the individual States, not by the Federal Government.

The tabulations in this leaflet of the open seasons for 1951-52 on fur animals and the summaries of the provisions of State and Provincial laws concerning possession, sale, shipment, export, and licenses have been prepared primarily to aid Federal officials in conducting investigations under the Lacey Act and enforcing its provisions and to answer inquiries of State game officials, trappers, and other interested persons. Every effort has been made to have the summaries correct, but the trapping seasons in many States and Provinces being subject to change by orders, or regulations of the respective conservation authorities, it would be well for trappers and others concerned to apply direct to the proper agency for the latest information on State and Provincial laws, orders, and regulations before engaging in trapping or other activities involving fur animals or parts thereof.

The Federal Lacey Act is found on page 42 of this leaflet.
